PREFACE.

The Publishers present to the public, this, their first, edition of the Astoria City Directory in which will also be found Directories of Seaside, the principal summer resort of Oregon, and South Bend, Pacific county, the chief city in the adjoining State of Washington, believing that the work will be accorded general satisfaction, no pains or expense having been spared to insure its accuracy and completeness.

Both Miscellaneous and Classified Directories have also received careful attention. In the latter will be found full and complete lists of all professions, occupations and trades.

The Publishers desire to express to the business and professional men of Astoria, their acknowledgement of the generous support they have given this work, and in conclusion would say that in the future they will be as unremitting in their endeavors to give general satisfaction as they have in the past.

INTRODUCTORY.

Astoria, the county seat of Clatsop county, is situated at the mouth of the Columbia River, some fifteen miles from the Pacific Ocean, and is the oldest English settlement on the Pacific Coast, having been a post of the Hudson Bay Company as early as 1808. The climate of Astoria is mild and very healthful, the average summer temperature being 61.6 degrees and that of winter 42.4 degrees. Though in latitude 46 degrees N, the grass remains green all winter and flowers are in full bloom throughout the month of December, and sometimes through January. Ocean steamers here from all parts of the world, and the river boats ply regularly to Portland, connecting with all trains from that point, and communication by boat is had with Gray's Harbor, Tillamook, Ilwaco, Fort Canby, Young's river, Knappton and rivers and bays near the city. The Astoria & South Coast Railway is being constructed and is to connect with the S. P. Co., in Washington or Yamhill counties, and is to be completed by September, 1891. Astoria is advantageously situated for becoming one of the largest commercial ports on the North Pacific Coast. It is situated on one of the largest fresh water harbors in the world. The entrance to this spacious harbor is as safe as that of the well known Puget Sound. The depth of water on the bar is now 24 feet in the shallowest places at extreme low tide and 35 feet at high tide. Its salmon interests, though not as large as in former years, is still very extensive, but the vast area of forest land contiguous, which is only very partially developed, will be the important factor in Astoria's prosperity. There is no country within fifty miles of the city that is not timbered, for the most part heavily, fir, spruce and cedars being the prevailing varieties. It is destined to be not only a large lumber manufacturing point, but of many other lines in the large scope of industries making use of wood. The country immediately about Astoria is hilly, but it has many fertile valleys that produce the cereals, hay, vegetables and fruit, wonderful in variety and quality. The city is beautifully situated on a promontory peninsula embraced by the Columbia River Bay on the north, Young's River Bay on the south and terminating at Smiths Point on the West. The average width is about three miles. It has three large sawmills, numerous canneries, machine shops, boat factories, etc. Twenty-five or thirty steamboats, numerous sloops and schooners, large and small, ply the waters of the Columbia and its tributaries in its vicinity. It has about 9,000 inhabitants. The present population, like that of most seaports, is cosmopolitan and represents all classes and conditions. Its markets are supplied with the products of all latitudes. Living is not more expensive than in the New England States, and wages are higher with a higher rate of interest for capital. Assessed value of real and personal property is $2,482,409. With the advent of railroads, to connect with trans-continental systems, Astoria is destined to become a seaport of the first rank.

✻ 1890 ✻

Seaside.—A growing town at the terminus of the Seaside division of the Astoria and South Coast Ry, twenty miles south of Astoria, the county seat. This place is destined to become the popular watering place and summer resort of the Northwest, owing to its general location and convenience in being reached by summer tourists and travelers. Since the advent of the railroad the country surrounding the town is becoming rapidly settled, and the inhabitants are now provided in all their wants by the merchants who are enabled to do a good business throughout the entire year instead of depending on the summer visitor for his patronage in trade. Good hotels and numerous private and public boarding houses afford the best of accommodations for the summer tourist. As a summer resort, this place cannot be surpassed on the Pacific Coast, offering it does the finest beach, both for surf-bathing and driving. Splendid hunting, small and large game, and a magnificent trout stream within half a mile of the town, offers the sportsman every inducement in this line. The population in the vicinity is about 250. Telegraph and express facilities will be afforded the public at an early date.

R. L. POLK & CO'S South Bend City Directory.

✠ 1890 ✠

South Bend, Wash.—A thriving town (soon to be incorporated) on the Willapa River immediately off Shoalwater Bay, in Pacific County, 22 miles northeast of Oysterville, the county seat, and 172 miles northwest of Portland, Or, and 57 miles north of Astoria. This place has grown from a village of 75 or 100 people to a busy and industrious town of 700 to 750 inhabitants, in the remarkably short period of seven months, and bids fair to become one of the chief cities in the State of Washington. Instead of the little country postoffice and store can now be found all classes of tradesmen and professional business men, all of whom are doing a lucrative trade in their various lines. Large lumbering mills, sash and door factories, shingle and lath mills, are kept running day and night to supply the great demands of the home consumers. The principal shipments at this early date in the history of the place are lumber, fish and oysters, but in a short time it is safe to say that various other industries and manufacturing interests will be added to these. Good school houses, churches and public buildings generally found in well regulated cities are being rapidly built and without doubt, South Bend will be the county seat of Pacific county in less than another year. Two banks are now doing a thriving business here and a third one is in contemplation. A live weekly newspaper, the South Bend Journal, ably represents the press interests of the town. The surrounding country, offering it does every inducement to settlers, is rapidly being settled. Timber, iron and other mineral resources are here in abundance.

Is the shipping port of the great North West and the only fresh water harbor for all classes of ships on the Pacific Coast and is 300 miles less navigation to the ports of South America. The Sandwich Islands, Europe and Australia than Puget Sound.

TEREDO, which destroy piling, ships, and other property in salt water harbors, can not live in this port.
